My research interest is in the field of student retention and success. I am currently a graduate student at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, where I am pursuing a Ph.D. in Educational Leadership. My research interests include the impact of social support on student retention and success, and the role of academic advisors in student success. I have published several articles on these topics in peer-reviewed journals, and I am currently working on a book manuscript on the same topic. I am also a frequent speaker at national and international conferences on student retention and success. I am currently serving as the president of the American Association of Student Retention and Success (AASRS) and as the vice president of the American Association of Academic Advisors (AACA).
